And then, at the end of a long-winded note, the following words appeared: "DEAR MRS. BARR:— "I have been seeing Mr. Lothrop and his wife and I understand that Mr. Treadwell is badly hurt by this letter; indeed, the walls have been crashing in. What can I do? I can't help it. Let me know, please. Sincerely yours, "J. L. MARVEL." I don't know what the house was that the thrills are crashing in, but I do know that it was not Mr. Treadwell's house. "I am glad," I thought to myself, "that Mrs. Treadwell has a friend like Mrs. Lothrop. Mrs. Lothrop ought to be very sorry she has a husband who uses such language. If she would stay away from his house she might be safe." One day, the following week, about eight o'clock, Mrs. Lothrop and I were at home and there was a great clatter at the gate. Looking up, I saw that she and Mrs. Barclay, with Jane, had come in a carriage. When they came in Jane went up to Mr. Treadwell to find out if there was anything she could do for him; but, after a few words, she turned to Mrs. Lothrop and said: "I'm afraid we're too late." "
