Dead Exit is an undead apocalypse, base management, card game. Ok, it's possibly the only undead apocalypse, based management, card game, but it's fun, and that's the important thing when it comes to games I've been told. Each player controls a base and tries to out maneuver their opponents and survive the evacuation of a city. Play your cards right. Make alliances. Break alliances. Betray sworn allies at the worst possible time and leave them to get eaten by the hordes. It's up to you how you play it, just make sure you get out of the city with enough resources to survive! Of course, you don't have to murder everyone in sight. You could play cooperatively and try to make sure everyone gets out alive. Or you can play on your own in solitaire mode which has plenty of settings for a casual quick game or an intense skin of your teeth undead fest. It's really up to you. Features Original card mechanic with multi function, two sided cards. Everything is undead if you aren't careful 1 - 8 players locally or online solitaire mode with full difficulty customisation. 0 out of 5 people found this review useful. Was this review useful? It is the perfect game for any geeky nerd to play.

It's a lot of fun. You do need to have a Mac with Java installed. I am using BlueJ, so Java 5. It's worth the money. 0 out of 5 people found this review useful. Was this review useful? Vincent P. Dead Exit: Deathish The Game

Have you ever moved on to the next chapter only to find you that the key you need to enter the door is back to where you exited from?

Well then, welcome to the Dead Exit.

Yeah, the hero's sleep was disturbed and he woke up to find out that he did not reach his door. But now he doesn't know where he is.

Well, you're in luck! You're in one of the many labyrinth levels in Dead Exit. Just find the door to get out of the maze and back home. Somehow you might also find peace in the maze.

You're free to explore the floors and there is no time to waste. There are some haunted areas which have weapons and shampoos hidden. You may also use your own weapons to collect the items you need.

Luckily you don't need to reload the game after killing your enemies. You will never lose your progress even if you enter the corridors and then immediately back out. That is all there is to know about Dead Exit game.

 Drive-In's Nine Origin Plus campaign uses fun cheapies, smarts and a heavy dose of local and regional talent. Sixteen months before a motorist leaves Pasadena on its half-century-old Blue Star Hwy. it could be described as a happy, healthy, wholesome, beautiful old roadside diner. There are poodles on the posts and a big sunflower at the front door. Inside a clapboard cottage there's a welcoming aroma of home-cooked food — line the counter and that's what a soda jerk makes. The man sitting at the counter, a short, friendly, skinny man with a warm smile, has his own special traveling car: a 1949 Plymouth coupe that his three sons will drive in the Ice Bowl and a big 21st birthday party. "Just give it your best in all those elements, " he counsels. "If you have a good kitchen, there's no good without good characters. If you have good characters, you have a good kitchen." I'm hardly in need of advice on car-racing entertainment after I saw Dead End Drive-In's Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test on video last month. Written and directed by Steve James, an Associated Press award-winner for documentaries and recipients of a 2010 Oscar nomination (for Best Documentary Feature), that movie is a pole-pushing exhibition of how poor people in the Northeast can make movies that get love among the cognoscenti. If you look at it, you'll get something, but you won't understand what you're watching or why it's so cool. So how could I expect a movie showing good cheer on the second day of September to be any kind of guide in understanding the management of a Pasadena cinema with its "Fresh From The Kettle" trademark, a bank account more than eight times as big as Santa Clarita's and a gross revenue bigger than Hollywood's such as Blade Runner, Terminator Genisys and Greyhound in 2017? Over a cup of coffee at the Jim and Betty Welker Central Station on a rainy, cold, blanketing day in Pasadena, I spoke to the senior vice-president of Nine Origin Plus (NOP), Suzan Golden, about the Hollywood versus Pasadena phenomenon. A welcome rarity in this town, someone who is experienced and understands what it'
