The cornerstone of the new gameplay engine is the combination of artificial intelligence (AI) and physics, developed through a series of game-changing innovations. “Combining physics and artificial intelligence has changed FIFA forever,” said David Rutter, technical director, FIFA. “With HyperMotion Technology, we are once again utilizing the full scope of the player’s body in the game, which allows us to achieve a level of intelligence and fluidity that simply wasn’t possible before.” To achieve maximum realism, FIFA uses its own proprietary engine. The engine is a significant upgrade over what the franchise has used in the past. More than 50 new AI behaviours are driven by data from player movements, such as the changing of positions, shooting, passing, shot placement and speed. Other factors such as ball physics, goalkeepers and defenders are all core elements that have been completely rebuilt. “This is the most powerful engine we have ever created,” said Rutter. “It is packed with complex physics, new artificial intelligence, and incredibly detailed animations.” At the core of the new engine is a new animation system that is responsible for creating all in-game movement. FIFA 22’s animation system is designed to provide precise and natural controls using the ball. Rutter said: “The animation system itself has been created with players in mind. It allows you to perform complex animations with movements like diving and rolling that would never be possible with previous animation systems.” One of the most radical changes to the game is the introduction of “instinctive passing” to replace the previous “drone-like” passing. Rutter said: “We have seen many players express frustration with current passing systems. This frustration led us to a true overhaul of our approach, and we have spent a lot of time implementing this within the new engine. Instead of relying on the player to think of a passing angle, the new passing system is based on instinctive actions and uses new physics-based techniques to aid the player.” With the use of the engine’s physics engine, players will now feel in control when approaching a pass, rather than the player being forced to guess and hope to put the ball in the right place. FIFA 22 boasts a full online matchmaking system. Rutter said: “We can now automatically bring together hundreds

FIFA (from Fifa) is a series of football video games developed and published by Electronic Arts. The series is named after the word for "football" in different languages. It was originally developed by Criterion Games in 2003, then EA acquired the series in 2008. The latest edition, FIFA 19, was released for PlayStation 4 and Xbox One on September 28, 2018. It is the third consecutive edition of the FIFA franchise, and the eighth overall game in the series. The term FIFA is used because some people think that the game is about all things soccer, when it is actually a sports simulation game about football. During its early years, the first game of the FIFA series, FIFA 08, was a huge success. It managed to sell 1.7 million copies in the first three days of release. This number was a lot for a new edition, after years of absence from the market, and it made the series as one of the most anticipated titles for the Christmas of 2008. However, the launch of a game is always an ordeal for developers and publishers. This is because they expect a lot of difficulties during the sales process, and they often cannot predict the results. Therefore, to help developers at this important moment, EA provided the servers needed to make sure that those who pre-ordered the game had a functional version in a few hours, and this allowed them to claim that they have sold one million copies within three days. This is not the first time that EA has shortened its release schedule. The fact that it happened now is because it has managed to fulfill that precondition with FIFA 19. It is a very special edition, and it is the first one to be released for PlayStation 4 and Xbox One. Not only has it sold more than one million units worldwide in less than 24 hours, but it has also surpassed FIFA 07's records, which were previously set during the early days of the series, and it marked the biggest FIFA in history. The previous editions had sold more than 2.7 million copies by the end of the first week. FIFA 07 was the first edition of the series. Therefore, it was a revolution on the market. It was the first of the series to use Frostbite engine, and it became the reference in terms of graphics, and according to EA, it was the first football game that could be played on a smartphone. FIFA 08 The second edition of the FIFA series, FIFA 08, was one of the most
