SciChart WPF SDK (2D 3D) Enterprise V6.0.1.12967

A: It's the language definition, not the language itself. I have no idea what you are talking about. If you want to install the WPF language, I will tell you. Go to the VS2017 installer -> Options -> Compiler -> Install You will see the other languages and can also install them. Q: Why does the "primary" scope have a different start time than the "non-primary" scope? If I have a non-primary scope like `$scope.bar`, I can set a timeout on the `$watch` like `$scope.$watch('bar', function(newValue, oldValue, scope) { ... });` And that watch will kick in when I access the `bar` property, and probably if I update the property. When I set a timeout on a primary scope like `$scope.$watch('foo', function(newValue, oldValue, scope) { ... });` I can access the `foo` property and update it, but the `$watch` never fires to watch that property. If I add a `$watch` on `bar` I can access that property. What's going on? Why does a primary `$watch` start later than a non-primary scope `$watch`, even though an identity comparison should always be true? A: Here is the `$digest` cycle: Scope 1 `$digest` cycle Scope 1 and Scope 2 `$digest` cycles are always run in strict order, that is first Scope 1, then Scope 2, then Scope 1 again, then Scope 2 again, etc. In rare cases when `$digest` cycles run simultaneously, the order is undefined. Scope 1 `$digest` cycle: Scope 1 (transient) watches are created { `bar: [...]` `foo: [...]` } Scope 2 `$digest` cycle: Scope 1 `$digest` cycle: All Scope 1 watches that have been created in the scope are removed { `bar: [...]` } The above exception was logged when an unhandled exception is thrown during the execution of a directive. For more information see the `$digest` Life Cycle section on Angularjs official website The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Ilex vomitoria and will be referred to hereafter by its cultivar name, '0cc13bf012
