Tallowmere Soundtrack Free (2022)

Transcending the restrictions of a dungeon-crawling action game, the soundtrack is cast in a distinctly cinematic form, inspired by countless films from the 60s, 70s and 80s. "The music drives the mood of the scene and is often as important or more so than dialogue in games" Many V&A experts have tried to debunk the myth but somehow everyone seems to feel they know the answer. Bold, brassy, boisterous and with a spine tingling chord sequence as far as the eye can see. The soundtrack marks the passage of a sprawling nightmare and is the perfect representation of what is about to transpire in the vault. Nothing is what it seems. The music is sometimes too frantic for the scene, often following a mad dash rather than a calm and measured pace. Minor annoyances aside, the music is frequently the best part of the game. 8 of the 9 kittens agree. PLAY FOR THE SOUNDTRACK NOW: About This

lyrics Ay, Ay Aiyah Aiyah Ayah The track is about the lake, its night time and it's good time. On the edge, measuring the width of the water, vertigo whispering shouts, lapping and overflowing, tanking, cracking and pushing, on the water. Little piggies, lighting fires, bobbing up and down, drink a little win, dive back down. Summer nights, puffy, Tallowmere's pounding, trickling through to the sea. Tallowmere, Ay, Ay, Ay, Ay, Ay, Ay Ayah Aiyah Aiyah Ayah, sinking under its own weight of water, mirths and mangrove, the peals of laughter and clashing waves smashing. Have a few too many drinks, then a few too many fights, then we're never really seen for it again. What a drama, what a muck, what a hell. Let's look at the sky, "Hey!" Some star, big or small. Your beauty, I steal mine, the moon ablaze. I'm senseless and committed, undeniable and unforgettable. Life is taking us to hell, can't say we don't understand, Tallowmere's not Paradise. Dance on the top, with your devil's queen, as the decay of you sets in. You'll end up hanging from the tree, like a weed. In a land of steeped grey, In a land of shadow and decay. The cold undulating hands of the water, catch us, and swallow us. We're one of the light, as we plummet to the storm. Hard surfaced destruction, flood, and churn, it just isn't fair. But we're here, Tallowmere's a lake, and there's the storms. We pike luge and shadows meet, you're a short-list lover, you'll stick around. Welcome to the Night Side, your diving coach just kicked out the chimney. You're blessed with glee, as our span goes, we have no one to blame but ourselves. Awake, in the dark, like the night, like the sea. Watched him stomping out the door. That's right, over the hill, drive blind. One in the pink is fine the rest of us know the coast is awful. Sinking, sinking into my own depth. Sugar, shake, sugar, shake, shake it up, baby. Who could see? We're burning up out of green. Broken
