A good number of text managers allow users to enter text and save it as a HTML file. However, most of them do not allow for user-specified formatting, in particular for specific types of text. Text2Html is designed to allow for that - the users can enter a document and specify its format. The output file is saved as a HTML file, while the user is prompted to choose the HTML template to apply. HTML templates are stored at C:\Users\[USERNAME]\AppData\Local\Commonware\ComSpec\Templates\HTML, which can be edited using the Text2Html add-on. Besides the ability to specify the format, Text2Html is designed for easy navigation. Users can go to the previously entered text in a simple way by clicking the Find button in the bottom-right corner of the program window, which opens a menu with several options, including Open, Open Recent, All Items and Recently Opened Items. Users can also jump to any part of the document using the Undo and Redo buttons, which works like a normal text editor's Undo and Redo buttons. There are a few limitations to Text2Html. First of all, the basic text formatting options are not available, such as bold, italic and color, or bold and italic. That said, users can apply a predefined style by going to File>Set Style. Secondly, the application does not allow for simple navigation across multiple documents. That said, when the user clicks to either the left or right of the page, a new page is opened with the selected text highlighted. Further, any highlighted text is automatically saved when the document is saved. Overall, Text2Html is a simple and easy-to-use text editor with basic formatting options, allowing users to specify formats for their text. It is designed for simple navigation, but its lack of accessibility features makes it less than ideal, especially for a professional grade option.
