This is the server code: @Path("/") public class GalleryService { @GET @Path("/{images/{id}") @Produces({"application/json"}) public String getImage(@PathParam("id") int id) { String imagePath = "/grid-images/i/m the server image.png"; return imagePath; } @Path("/{images/") public class GalleryHttpException { @GET @Produces(MediaType.APPLICATION_STREAM_JSON) @Path("thumb") public String thumb() { String image = ""; return image; } } } Is there anyway i can get the URL of the image in the server response from the code? I've tried with ImageURL, but is doesn't work. I need to get the images' path from the code to show in the ListView that i have created. I can't reach it to make it show up in the ListView. This is the code of the ListView(code behind): public partial class MainPage : PhoneApplicationPage { public ObservableCollection images { get; set; } public MainPage() { InitializeComponent(); FlowDocumentReader reader = new FlowDocumentReader(); object[] content = reader.

What's new in The Midnight Sanctuary Demo:

contract Please review the tab labeled [refactor contract]. At the moment the package is on the cycle for being put into contract but it hasn't been committed yet (because of the test failures...). The major goal is to release an interface for tests, a QML plugin kind of interface for the Motion concept. The MoveBase class is a unimplemented stub and doesn't even exist any more. It would be moved to a new MoveBaseQml class in the Move qtbase package. Another goal is to have a cleaner interface between tests and implementation. We will need a MultiAboutDialog.cpp to be implemented from tests, an AboutDialogHandler.cpp with the showAboutDialog method, and a PlugIn.cpp etc. After this you can just commit the refactor & release. The compile process on my system is usually fast enough to go through the remaining change. Well, the compiles will be a bit longer it's everything that changes... After this you can just commit the refactor & release. The compile process on my system is usually fast enough to go through the remaining change. Well, the compiles will be a bit longer it's everything that changes... It wouldn't be hard to just add the QML plugins to such a QT plugin architecture like in KDAB or Qt Creator. All this "refactoring" would have never happened if they had simply provided a compiled example app that can be copied into /usr/lib/qt4/plugins. That way they wouldn't have to provide documentation,,ui files, docs and everything, and they wouldn't have to port the application to Qml, MVVM and other stuff.Here's the full transcript of our debate on Do your homework BBC Newsnight Last week, I interviewed Boris Johnson here on Newsnight. We debated a range of issues that have recently been the subject of public concern. During the course of the debate, and off-camera, I raised concerns about the so-called "sofa cabinet" process - in which cabinet ministers are asked to resign in order to pave the way for ministerial by-elections. The process was brought into question three weeks ago, when Jeremy Hunt resigned as Health and Social Care Secretary in order to stand in for Theresa May at a by-election in South Staffordshire.
