Adobe Photoshop is a desktop computer-based graphics software program for photographers, graphic designers and hobbyists. The Photoshop software can be used with a mouse, a stylus or a touchpad. It allows the user to edit, crop, resize and otherwise work on digital photographs. They can create and edit print-ready raster images. It can also be used with live webcams, smart phones and tablet computers. The software is capable of doing many other things including drawing, vector graphic design, and retouching photographs. Designers can use Photoshop to create high-resolution images for the web, print, film, advertising and other industries. Photoshop became a very popular photo editing tool when it was released by Adobe in 1990. It has since become the industry standard and is used by professional photographers and graphic artists. Adobe Photoshop is available in both traditional and cloud based models. Professionals prefer the traditional version whereas school children find the cloud version ideal. There are free and paid versions of Photoshop. Adobe Photoshop Free Photoshop has two editions and a trial version. The free versions may be used for non-commercial use and they're intended for low-level use only. The Supreme Court has said that the government cannot make Aadhaar mandatory for various services including services at public health institutions, education, welfare benefits such as mid-day meals, scholarships, jobs and scholarships for the poor. It said this in its judgement on the top court's earlier order regarding the direct benefit transfer scheme (DBT). The apex court said, "The court reiterates its view that Aadhaar cannot be made mandatory for any purpose. The court allows the Centre to make Aadhaar mandatory for certain specified services only." The Centre submitted that a majority of the services/benefits are only available to those eligible to avail the services. The government suggested that Aadhaar could be made mandatory for certain services only because they were not available for all and this would help in minimising and monitoring fraud. "Central or state governments should have the discretion to take Aadhaar authentication and linkage of Aadhaar with bank account to facilitate delivery of direct benefit schemes to beneficiaries, particularly, to the needy and weaker sections," said the government. Justice A.K. Sikri said that Aadhaar cannot be made mandatory for services given to rich or poor. It can be made mandatory only for the services for which it was designed, said the judge, who was the lone member of the bench that had dealt with the case earlier. The decision for the top court judgment came on the Centre's request for delay in part. The Centre wanted an extension of more than three weeks for its decision in the matter. However, the government had earlier argued that the information provided by the UIDAI and the state governments were erroneous. A five-judge constitution bench, headed by Chief Justice Dipak Misra and comprising Justices A.K. Sikri, R.K. Agrawal, A.M. Khanwilkar, D.Y. Chandrachud and N.V. Ramana, had reserved its order on the Centre's plea last week. The bench was hearing a batch of petitions, including those filed by senior counsel Shyam Divan and Soli Sorabjee, who challenged Aadhaar in the Supreme Court. To prepare its order on the Centre's request for more time, the top court had earlier asked the Centre to submit specific reasons stating why it could not submit its application for more time in the present case. The Centre had earlier told the top court that it had "expended several resources to make Aadhaar voluntary and was constrained
