Each program has its own strengths and weaknesses. Many are capable of image-editing basics but lack some of Photoshop's more advanced features. Others give up too much control to be used by a beginner, and yet others are, well, goofy. As image-editing programs increasingly use layers and other editing options like the ones in Adobe Photoshop, the gap in the market continues to narrow. While Photoshop continues to be the most powerful and sophisticated image-editing program available, the evolution of today's imaging programs shows that the days of relegating the novice to simple edits with an old-fashioned non-layers editing system are gone. In this section, we look at the pros and cons of each of these programs, but be warned that we're simplifying and oversimplifying many

Collaboration can add credibility and value to an agency's work in a way that can't be matched by working alone. Even if that agency does not directly engage with community partners, the agency can easily benefit from the perspectives of those partners. Enter the concept of the Lead Agency – a collaborating tool. The Lead Agency is a guiding framework for an agency's specific partnerships that sets the criteria and expectations for the work a collaborating partner is to provide. A Lead Agency can engage any size agency, from a single person to a large agency, and any level of complexity. The Lead Agency Framework is a collaborative effort of Demystifying Disability, DAWN, Creative Mornings, and a small group of Disability and Community Partners. Your agency-side Lead Agency partner is a source of professional and personal insight that helps your agency achieve its goals. Having relationships with the right partners can bring value that will assist your work. The Lead Agency Framework provides the structure for your relationships with the right partners. We are excited to have Demystifying Disability and Creative Mornings involved in this new effort. We've been involved in this space for a while and know what's working – what's not. Working with others that are closer to disability and the disability community is a great way to make this a practice that can be scaled.

Selective extraction and analysis of fish and shellfish oils by packed-column supercritical fluid chromatography. A packed-column supercritical fluid chromatographic method for the separation of omega-3 docosahexaenoic acid (DHA) content from the omega-6 linolenic acid (LNA) in fish oils has been developed. An octadecyl silane functionalized-packed column containing 6.0 microm porous silica-functionalized particles was used as the stationary phase. Calculation of selectivity factors of 28 species of fish and shellfish oils based on the chromatographic data indicated a unique selectivity factor ordering for the cold-pressed oils. The fatty acid composition and DHA content data obtained by applying the developed method to common domestic fish oils indicate that the two values are not correlated. The recoveries of the DHA values for the analyzed fish and shellfish oils were within 93-107%. The proposed method offers several advantages over commonly applied methods, including the use of water as the mobile phase, no use of organic solvents, no use of organic or inorganic salts, and no need for derivat

Q: MySQL View Filtering Is there a way to filter a view in MySQL. For instance, let's say that I have a simple view: create view Food ([color] char(5)) as select Food, color from Food order by Food; Now, let's say that I want a simple view that, for example, shows me all the food with color orange. Can I filter out the rest of the records? A: A view isn't a normal table. It doesn't really have any structure of its own. The view basically just a construct of the views engine that it is using. Your best bet is to just have the view list all the rows you want to select in a table. It will be a lot slower, but simpler, than trying to build the data retrieval in a view. If you do want to go the query route, you can sort your data to get what you want.

Enlarge Image Ford The Ford Explorer is an iconic SUV. It's iconic because it's been on the road for so long. It's iconic because it became one of the most reliable vehicles in the world. So when Ford decided to make a Shelby version of the Explorer, it probably didn't expect much. It's still an Explorer, after all. But its 2018 SVT Raptor is a different kind of machine. The company sent us a truck for the photographer to test. We don't expect you to buy one, but that's just because we're testing it.

Enlarge Image Ford The 2018 Ford Raptor is powered by the 6.2-liter V8 that's also inside the Ford F-150. That mill has more horsepower and torque than its big brother, producing 570 hp and 650 lb-ft of torque. However, that's still less than the 700 hp and 830 lb-ft of torque from the Dodge RAM 1500's 6.2-liter V8. What the Raptor has over its rival is its aluminum space frame chassis, and a largely independent suspension.
