History of Photoshop The earliest version of the Adobe Photoshop known as Type 1 was released to the public on 15 December 1995. With the commercial success of the application, the number of people creating graphics for the Web moved the software to the center stage of graphic design, gradually gaining traction on the desktop computers. Photoshop changed how designers did their work on computers, and it changed the world. Before Photoshop, graphics were designed on paper and then hand-drawn. It was time-consuming and it was one of the main reasons designers chose the lesser-known Photoshop over the far superior Macromedia Dreamweaver. Q: In iOS 7, how to prevent app-link shortcuts from opening the "More" pane when calling an app from the Share sheet? I'm using a custom iOS7 share sheet like this: it displays a list of apps/web-services from a share extension you're using on your iPhone. Everything is working fine, except that every time I tap on an app from the share sheet, it opens the App store and calls the app. How can I prevent this from happening? I want to use the same share extension as apps I use on the phone, without having to go to the app store every time I use it. A: You would have to tell the recipient app what you do through your extension. This would require your extension to know enough about the app to tell it what to do. This could be complicated if the app doesn't provide a well defined interface. I have a similar solution in iReplicate that uses a custom URL scheme to trigger actions. A: I actually ended up extending the sharer object to provide this behavior. For example, in my iOS share extension that is being used as a search icon in the share panel, when a user taps on the share extension icon, a new share sheet displays: If the user tries to tap on an app, the app opens: On the other hand, if the user taps on an app action, the sharer object from my share extension is called. The sharer object then is passed a URL to the URL scheme, and the app-link is tapped (or other action occurs in the app). In my sharer object: `-(BOOL)application:(UIApplication *)application openURL:(NSURL *)url options:(NSDictionary *)options { if ([url scheme] == kITunesSearchScheme) { return [super application:application openURL:url options:options]; } return NO; }` Then, in my recipient app: `-(BOOL)application:(UIApplication *)application openURL:(NSURL *)url { NSDictionary *options = @{@"url": url}; // I checked if the url contains the search term, and only opened up the app-`

Laparoscopic proximal gastrectomy with esophagojejunal anastomosis for gastric cancer with Roux-en-Y reconstruction: a case report. In the last decade, laparoscopic surgery has been increasingly used in the management of gastric cancer. We present the case of a 52-year-old male patient who underwent a laparoscopic proximal gastrectomy with an esophagojejunal anastomosis. We also describe the perioperative and short-term outcomes of this procedure. This is a case report of a 52-year-old male patient who underwent a laparoscopic proximal gastrectomy with esophagojejunal anastomosis. Preoperative staging revealed cT2N0M0 distal gastric cancer. The patient was placed in the left lateral decubitus position with arms placed above his head. Three 5-mm trocars were introduced into the abdominal cavity; two for the optics and one for the assistant. The stomach was approached through a retrocolic approach in the left side of the peritoneum. Dissection was performed around the stomach down to the lesser omentum. The short gastric vessels and right gastroepiploic vessels were dissected with the harmonic scalpel. The short gastric vessels were transected and divided; lymph nodes were removed from the splenic hilus. The esophagus and right gastroepiploic vessels were divided and separated from the stomach and the left gastroepiploic vessels. The jejunum was mobilized and divided, and the jejunum opening was closed with a running nonabsorbable suture. The jejunum was placed inside the jejunal pouch, and a circular-stapled anastomosis was performed. The stomach was placed through an umbilical incision; the omentum was fixed with an absorbable suture. The specimen was removed through a small incision in the left flank of the umbilicus. The specimen was extracted and sent for pathological analysis. The operation lasted 200 min. The patient was discharged from the hospital 8 days after the operation. Pathologic examination demonstrated a moderately differentiated tubular adenocarcinoma in the distal two thirds of the stomach measuring  $4 \times 3.5 \times 4$  cm. The patient underwent adjuvant chemotherapy. No complications related to the procedure or hospitalization were observed at follow-up.
