Adobe Bridge: An Adobe product that has evolved from the Adobe Catalog. Bridge is the organizing tool for your images. It enables you to import, organize, and manage files, including organizing images and publishing them to a variety of websites and services. You can even use Bridge to capture photos as you import them. See Book I, Chapter 4, to learn more.

Adobe Camera Raw: A version of Photoshop that enables you to color-correct the raw image data captured by your DSLR. You can also use Adobe Camera Raw to view the image in a variety of ways (as you can in Photoshop) so that you can evaluate the color, contrast, and other characteristics. If you have a point-and-shoot or other camera with an exposed Raw file, you can use Adobe Camera Raw to improve your image. See Book III, Chapter 4, to learn more.

Adobe Creative Suite: Photoshop, along with Adobe Flash and Dreamweaver, is part of the Creative Suite of products. This suite is a bundle of three Adobe-specific applications: Photoshop, Adobe Flash, and Dreamweaver. These applications are aimed at web developers, designers, and other professionals. Adobe licenses these applications separately; a subscription to the entire Creative Suite covers the cost of these applications. You can purchase the software on its own as well.

Adobe Edge Animate: This digital storytelling and animation software enables you to create web content, such as websites, animations, and video. Adobe Edge Animate works by inserting graphical assets, such as images, animations, and audio, into layers and then combining them to make a whole, customized, interactive multimedia experience. It was designed with developers in mind, but its simplified interface and many ready-made graphics, effects, and transitions make it an interesting option for design students who are interested in creating multimedia projects. See Book III, Chapter 5, to learn more.

Scheduling Time to Work: It's a good idea to schedule time to get up to a good work flow. Most of us are better at building a system than we are at sticking with it day after day. So you might want to consider a time for getting up to your work flow each day. It's also a good idea to consider your purpose for shooting a particular set of images. You may be after a specific look or style, or you may simply want to create some great images for an assignment or publication.

The Angels believe in the presence of a Deities in every pocket of time and space. It was the practice of most ancient people to invoke the magic of nature, gods and spirits as a means of conjuring up help in times of need, and to avoid problems, sickness and accidents. The belief that our spiritual essence can be communicated to another person was pre-ancient, and has been an integral part of the art of human expression through the centuries. Angels and Zen masters talk in the same language. All who touch are touched, all who are touched are touched. That is the basis for the Twelve Step programme and for the Buddha's teaching on "The way of truth." Only the words are different. The Book of I Ching. The Book of I Ching, is a collection of almost 3000 predecessors of Chinese Sage I Ching. Each one of them provided a description of the changing life situation and their choice of the hexagram to guide them into their daily practical decision making. They were given terms to describe their result. We could say that these are descriptive, a collection of the uses of hexagrams. And we have given the meaning of the hexagrams to be a descriptive book. We have our own twelve steps that are similar to the Twelve Steps of Alcoholics Anonymous. The Twelve Steps in this case are used for the Twelve aspects of our own being. These are the Hexagrams as described in the book. Here is one example of the interpretation of the Hexagrams as a description of a point in one's daily life. It is a classic example and was given by I Ching as a description of his own teaching. It is at the same time a description of the Twelve Steps as we understand them, as they are used in A.A. For the sake of simplicity, we have named the Twelve Steps as I Ching names them, but they could also be called the Taos, or sayings, of the hexagrams in the book. DIGGING - The first step of the I Ching or of any Twelve Step programme is the acknowledgement of the problem. The problem is the reason for the separation from the One Source. This is the acknowledgement of the separation, the choice. The first step is the acknowledgement,

"To talk about mass surveillance is too vast a subject, and it feels good to narrow it down. You can talk for all of 30 seconds about the ways in which the National Security Agency collects and stores large amounts of data about where you have been and what you have done. That's surveillance. That's what the FBI is interested in. The Obama administration has gone through four directors of the NSA in as many years. The NSA is roughly as large as the United States Army. They collect hundreds of gigabytes a day. So the argument against the data mining that has gone on here — that it should be limited or we shouldn't have done it at all — you can't have it both ways. If you don't like what the government is doing — and a lot of the members of the Congress, and most of the American people, are opposed to it — then you have to choose between constitutional government and the illegal spying that has been going on, in violation of the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution, and the other rights that are guaranteed by it." "I think that the court should just do what it's supposed to do, and that is apply the law evenly to everybody. And I would hope that there is, as there has been in the past, some independent review of what has been done in this case. And I know that there are some who do not believe that the FISA court is independent. But it is. It is bipartisan. And it has been reviewed by members of Congress. The number of judges do not change. It's that the intelligence committees that have been bipartisan, and the court is made up of district and circuit judges. In other words, it is a real and independent court that is reviewing the way in which this has been done. So there has been adequate judicial review, and that should be enough." "We now have a new Director of National Intelligence. And the question is, of all the things that the Director of National Intelligence has to do, which is the number one concern of Congress, at the top of the list should be a determination of what the NSA and how they work and what their responsibilities are. That is what has gone wrong, and at the same time that has created this whole controversy. In many ways, it is unprecedented. We have a new head of the NSA. And I know there are some who say, well, we knew that he was
