C:\Users\a>echo str3: %str3% str1: example str2: example2 str3: example3 str1: example2 str2: example2 str3: example3 Any ideas why this is happening? A: If you are trying to compare the content of a drive on a user directory, you can use the %CD% environment variable.
For example: @echo %CD% will print to the screen the path of the currently selected drive. From the same documentation: CD /? %CD% Display the current directory. So a typical command could be: set str=C:\Temp\ set str2=C:\Users\a\Desktop\ if "%CD%" == "%str%" echo Hi! A: You may be seeing this because each drive is appended with a drive letter before the local path. You can use the CD command to see the drive you
